CHANGING LIVES & THE WORLD FOR GOD.

What it's like to study at a Christian school like Andrews University.

If you're from a Christian tradition, you'll feel comfortable at Andrews University. There may be a few things that may seem different if you've never worshipped with Seventh-day Adventists or been at one of their schools before.

The Seventh-day Adventist church is a community of believers which grew out of the Protestant tradition. As a community of believers, Adventists focus on Saturday as a day of worship, and celebrate their belief in the second coming of Christ.

Our name reflects the church's commitment to sharing the incredible news of Christ around the world. We're named after J.N. Andrews, the first member of our church to work as a missionary, taking seriously Christ's command to take the gospel to the whole world. Andrews, along with his son and daughter, left for Europe in 1874, the same year our school began operations in Battle Creek, Michigan (we moved to our present location in 1901).

As a community of believers, we believe that God calls us to focus on the entire person. This whole-person emphasis is reflected in our school slogan Corpus Mens Spiritus, Latin for body, mind, spirit. It is found even in our cafeteria, where you'll discover a healthy-body focused lacto-ovo vegetarian diet, including a number of meat substitutes if you happen to be missing Southern-fried chicken (the cafeteria also accomodates vegan diets).

While a significant number of our students come from a Seventh-day Adventist background, all students who are interested in living and studying within a Christian context are welcome.

The importance of walking the talk.

With all that in mind, we invite our students to take their Christianity beyond the church pew and the classroom, and to put it into real-life practice, either in the local community or around the world. Our Benton Harbor Street Ministries program, which touches lives each weekend in that city, was recently discussed at a national seminar on volunteerism at Harvard University. Other students take on the world, slipping away for a few weeks or a school year to go serve on the front lines elsewhere around the globe.

Only connect.

Prayer is the fuel of connection on our campus. While each of our students seeks to understand and fulfill God's will, there are a number of opportunities — with teachers, fellow students and others on our campus — to pause and call on God as we work, study and prepare for the future.

We gather together.

Besides prayer, you'll find numerous opportunities to gather with other Christians and celebrate God's leading in your life. These include our weekly chapel, informal Bible study groups or church services on Friday night and Saturday. Many of the larger meetings on our campus take place in the Pioneer Memorial Church, a place of worship that has been featured on ABC television and in a worldwide satellite evangelistic series and other Christian television programming.
